The annual scientific meeting of the Academy of Neurologic Communication Disorders and Sciences (ANCDS) is coming (insert date range), and we invite you to participate through sponsorship of our meeting or student fellowship awards. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this year's annual meeting will be held virtually. The annual meeting typically attracts up to 150 researchers, faculty, clinicians, and students from a variety of fields dedicated to the clinical management of neurologic communication disorders such as aphasia, apraxia, and dysarthria resulting from stroke, traumatic brain injury, or other diseases affecting neurological function. In our new virtual format, ANCDS will be able to accommodate up to 250 live attendees and an unlimited number of participants who will have the opportunity to view the presentations at a later date.

Our mission is to offer an affordable educational meeting for anyone with a clinical and/or research interest in neurologic communication disorders. To accomplish this goal, we are seeking sponsorships from ANCDS members, individuals, and companies that provide goods and/or services associated with the clinical management of neurologic communication impairments.

We ask you to consider partnering with ANCDS to help provide relevant continuing education at a reasonable price and to advance the professional goals of our members. Your sponsorship is greatly appreciated and will be recognized as noted below. There are no limits for the number of sponsors at each level.
